

NACP officially confirms tough rules of e-declarations for anticorruption activists

26.07.2017

While the Rada fails to include in its plenary agenda President's bills aimed at abolishing e-declarations for anticorruption activists (#6674), NACP issues a legal opinion that confirms worst fears of the activists. Thus, NACP may consider as potential declarants people who participated in the trainings conducted at the expense of the anticorruption project, as well as those who happen to receive from third parties the money from anticorruption projects of the international technical assistance. It is absolutely not clear how NACP will track the violators, since the law obliges all such persons to decide individually whether they are subjects to e-declaration. Such a collision will end up with potential declarants not knowing about their obligation and being persecuted by NACP.
